

Suppose I choose to join a session, I will see a pop-up window prompting me to enter the ID of the session I want to join. If I enter a session ID that does not exist or the session has been closed/locked, I will see an error message that the ID I entered is not available and to try again.

Once I enter a correct session ID, I will be redirected to a page where I will be requested to provide some personal preferences for myself (refer to providing personal information story). Lastly, I will have the option to block off time slots (refer to custom calendar restrictions story).

Once I am done providing information, I can click a button to join the session and go into the session's page. In the page I will see a table with all members. I will have to wait for the host to close the session to proceed (refer to the closing a session story).
